

2013 Navy and Marine Corps COSC Conference

The Naval Center for Combat & Operational Stress Control (NCCOSC) appreciates the support and collaboration from its partners and stakeholders which have ensured the success of the annual Navy and Marine Corps COSC conference.

Due to a Department of Defense effort to conserve resources, the conference will not be held in 2013. The guiding principle behind the conference -- to strengthen the psychological health of our Sailors and Marines -- continues unabated.

"In 2013 NCCOSC will collaborate with the Defense Center of Excellence for Psychological Health & Traumatic Brain Injury (DCoE) in its Warrior Resilience Conference, which is pending approval, with an NCCOSC track that will focus on the clinical and scientific aspects of combat and operational stress control," said Capt. Scott Johnston, director of NCCOSC.

Plenary and track sessions from the 2011 and 2012 COSC conferences are available at www.nccosc.navy.mil and www.youtube.com/NCCOSC.
